Presidents Report

Dear Members,

At our next meeting on Monday 9th of September we will be holding our Annual All Cockatiel Table Show. A schedule is on page 12 of this edition of NCSA News. It would be great to see lots of birds entered after a quiet last show.

At our last meeting we held our Annual Whiteface Table Show. Show Champion was won by Peter Galea with a Whiteface Cock AOC-AOV (Class 6) Reserve Champion was also won by Peter Galea with a Whiteface Normal Hen (Class 2). Well done Peter and Alan our exhibitors.

Details of the 2019 Christmas Party are in this edition of NCSA News on pages 14 & 15 as there is no November Meeting. Remember that Membership Renewals are due in November

Hope to see you soon.

BIRDS in BACKYARDS

Autumn Survey - 2018 results!

Submitted by Monica on 11 Jun 2018.

Hurrah, you did it! Give yourselves a pat on the back, your Autumn Surveys are complete and we have some of the results to share with you.

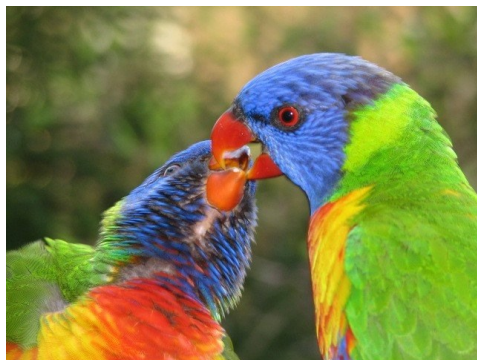

Rainbow Lorikeets still on top!

For our first Birds in Backyards seasonal survey, 175 people surveyed 210 sites around the country and counted a total of 16,698 birds across 222 species. Not a bad effort, team!

Rainbow Lorikeets topped the surveys, appearing in the top 10 lists for NSW, Queensland, Victoria and South Australia. These colourful, loud little parrots are the most frequently counted birds in both the Birds in Backyard surveys and the annual week-long Aussie Backyard Bird Count. Catch up on Holly's blog post "Rainbow Lorikeets: Fun facts about a fun bird" to learn more about these playful birds.

Your top ten birds nationally (with percent of total birds counted in brackets) were:

- Rainbow Lorikeet (9%)
- Noisy Miner (8%)
- Pied Currawong (7%)
- Australian Magpie (4%)
- Sulphur-crested Cockatoo (4%)
- Common Starling (3%)
- Crested Pigeon (3%)
- House Sparrow (3%)
- Galah (2%)
- Magpie Lark (2%)

A keen eye will note that the percentage of each species surveyed are quite small. This is probably because of the 222 species that were counted, each species only appears once or twice across a survey and so numbers are spread out. So the top ten birds barely squeezed over the line. But the really excellent news is that you are observing a really good diversity of birds in your spaces!

AUSTRALIAN BIRDS in BACKYARDS

Crimson Rosella

What does it look like? Description:

There are several colour forms of the Crimson Rosella. The form it is named for has mostly crimson (red) plumage and bright blue cheeks. The feathers of the back and wing coverts are black broadly edged with red. The flight feathers of the wings have broad blue edges and the tail is blue above and pale blue below and on the outer feathers. Birds from northern Queensland are generally smaller and darker than southern birds. The 'Yellow Rosella' has the crimson areas replaced with light yellow and the tail more greenish. The 'Adelaide Rosella' is intermediate in colour, ranging from yellow with a reddish wash to dark orange. Otherwise, all the forms are similar in pattern. Young Crimson Rosellas have the characteristic blue cheeks, but the remainder of the body plumage is green-olive to yellowish olive (occasionally red in some areas). The young bird gradually attains the adult plumage over a period of 15 months

Similar Species:

The adult Crimson Rosella is similar to male Australian King-Parrots, but differs by having blue cheeks, shoulders, and tail, a whitish, rather than red, bill and a dark eye. Immature Crimson Rosellas also differ from female and immature King-Parrots by having blue cheeks, a whitish bill and a more yellow-green rather than dark green colouring.

Where does it live? Distribution:

There are several populations of the Crimson Rosella. Red (crimson) birds occur in northern Queensland, in southern Queensland to south-eastern South Australia and on Kangaroo Island. Orange birds are restricted to the Flinders Ranges region of South Australia, while yellow ones are found along the Murray, Murrumbidgee and neighbouring rivers (where yellow birds meet red birds they hybridise, producing orange offspring). Red birds have been introduced to Norfolk Island and New Zealand.

Breeding:

The Crimson Rosella's nest is a tree hollow, located high in a tree, and lined with wood shavings and dust. The female alone incubates the white eggs, but both sexes care for the young. The chicks remain dependent on their parents for a further 35 days after leaving the nest.
